

SAINT PARTHENIUS, BISHOP OF LAMPSACUS

Saint Parthenius was a native of the city of Melitoupolis (in northwestern Asia Minor), where his father Christopher served as deacon. The youth did not receive adequate schooling, but he learned the Holy Scripture by attending church services. He had a good heart and distributed to the poor the money he earned working as a fisherman.

Filled with the grace of God, St. Parthenius from age 18 healed the sick in the name of Christ, cast out demons and worked other miracles. Learning of the young man's virtue, Bishop Philetus of Melitoupolis educated him and ordained him presbyter.

In 325, during the reign of Constantine the Great, Archbishop Achilles of Cyzicus made him bishop of the city of Lampsacus (Asia Minor). In the city were many pagans, and the saint fervently began to spread faith in Christ, confirming it through many miracles and by healing the sick. The saint sought permission of the emperor to tear down the pagan temple and build a Christian church in its place. Constantine received Parthenius with honor, authorized the destruction of the pagan temple, and provided him with the means to build a church.

In one of the razed temples, St. Parthenius found a large marble slab which he thought would be very suitable as an altar and had it moved to the church. Through the malice of the devil, who became enraged at the removal of the stone from the pagan temple, the cart overturned and killed the driver Eutychian. St. Parthenius restored him to life by prayer.

The saint was so kind that he refused healing to no one who came to him or who chanced to meet him by the wayside, whether he suffered from bodily illnesses or was tormented by unclean spirits. People even stopped going to physicians, since St. Parthenius healed all the sick for free with the great power of the name of Christ. He converted a multitude of idol-worshippers to the true God.

St. Parthenius died peacefully and was solemnly buried

“Rejoice, O Virgin Theotokos, full of grace! From you shone the Sun of Righteousness, Christ our God, enlightening those who sat in darkness! Rejoice, and be glad, O righteous elder; you accepted in your arms the Redeemer of our souls, Who grants us the Resurrection.”

Troparion, Tone I

“In truth you were revealed to your flock as a rule of faith, an image of humility and a teacher of abstinence; your humility exalted you; your poverty enriched you. Hierarch Father Parthenius, entreat Christ, our God, that our souls may be saved.”

Troparion, Tone IV

“By a flood of tears you made the desert fertile, and your longing for God brought forth fruits in abundance. By the radiance of miracles you illumined the whole universe! O our holy father Luke, pray to Christ our God to save our souls!”

Troparion, Tone VIII

If you are an Orthodox woman seeking the opportunity to help someone in need, ZOE Women’s Center needs you. ZOE is currently recruiting for a 2021 training class of volunteer life coaches, who will work with women in distress due to an unplanned pregnancy. Nursing or related healthcare experience is a plus but is not required. Please contact Paula Kappos

“What a close connection there is between the Church in heaven and the Church upon the earth.
What love there is between them.

The Church here unceasingly remembers, calls upon in prayer and glorifies the Church in heaven
for the great deeds accomplished on earth for God’s sake.
The Church in heaven continuously prays for the Church on earth, and intercedes for the departed, in the hope of resurrection, of eternal life and of union with God.

The Church’s love is immense and divine.
Let us enter in the spirit of this love the Holy Orthodox Church and be penetrated by it.”

St. John of Kronstadt

MEETING OF THE LORD

The Feast of the Meeting of the Lord in the Temple (Feb. 2) is called in Greek Υπαπαντή (Hypapante) from the verb ὑπαντ-άω,— 1) come, or go to meet as a friend; 2) meet, encounter, agree to, present oneself at, reply or object to; 3) come in response, ensue; 4) fall in with, correspond with.

- I. There is always a meeting, a coming together after breaking apart.
We wake in the morning to encounter the day, to make a good start,
Praying to the Spirit to respond and abide, which moves tenderly,
Not commanding, but as the air moves heat, overwhelmingly.

But “not for me the martyrdom, the ecstasy of thought and prayer,
Not for me the ultimate vision.” A modicum of dignity beneath a layer
Of self-serving doubt, my life has been estrangement and too many sins, Regretting not knowing Greek better, nor sooner of wisdom that’s within.

- II. It can be in pandemic seasons, on snowy evenings or early springtime rain,
When sleep cannot refresh nor inspiration dislodge the annoying pain,
Remember then Joseph, Mary and the Child, fulfilling customs and tradition,
Let’s learn from them, not our domain, bedeviled, terabytes and exhibition.

Blessed are you if taught to pray for consolation of the nations,
In old age prayer will be its own reward, a pacifying revelation,
Candles, incense, colors, blue, silver, green, gold, red, and glory;
Simeon and Anna in their time prophetic, now become our story.

- III. To live with grace, and quell anxiety, despair, envy and hostility,
Think of astronomers and poets, heroes of theology and civility,
Brodsky, Eliot, Struve, Schmemann, Meyendorff, all mind’s delights,
Saints sharing, weeping icons, scientific angels, books imbued with light.

There may be an app, “A way to the Temple,” downloading hints of salvation,
Yet still you must rise, walk by the pillars of truth, grounds of holy renovation,
Where God and man, young and old, male and female, you and I, will find,
Together, mutual repentance, the feasting of souls on songs in soundless time.

Wait not for wealth or honor, rather pray that passions dim and cease,
Find comfort every day in holiness, saying, “Now can I depart in peace!”
Such is the gift of knowing history, a joy complete, a fated turn,
So will life is purified by humility, so too may all God’s children learn.

Fr. Alexander Garklaus
